History

Community Library of the Shenango Valley

Library service in the City of Sharon began in 1903 as a privilege enjoyed only by those with paid membership in the F. H. Buhl Club. In the early 1920s, community leaders recognized the need for every person to secure free access to desired books.

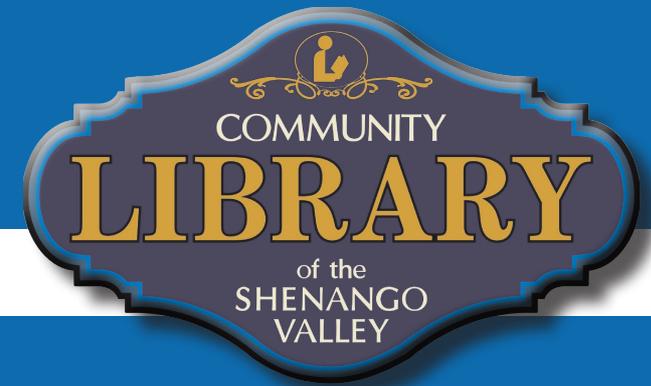

The Sharon Free Public Library formally opened on February 1, 1923. Response to the Free Library was enthusiastic with nearly 2,000 new registrations in the first year. By the late 1960s, overcrowding forced the library to find a new home and the present library was constructed in 1971 on Sharpsville Avenue.

The Library continues to be a vital community resource. In 1993, the City of Hermitage joined Sharon in funding the Library. In the spring of 2007, the Library became a private non-profit organization.

Stey-Nevant Branch

In 1932, the Farrell Public Library opened on the second floor of the Farrell Fire Station, thanks to two Farrell High School teachers, Helen Stey and Sarah Cooley. A new library building was constructed on the corner of Roemer Boulevard and Beechwood Avenue in 1951. In 1976, the library became a department of the city of Farrell and the name was changed to the Stey-Nevant Public Library, honoring Mrs. Stey and Michael Nevant, who was mayor of Farrell when the Library opened.

In March of 2015, due to economic difficulties, the city approached the CLSV Board of Directors for their help in keeping the library open. Beginning January 2016, the library became a branch of the Community Library of the Shenango Valley.
